What Should You Do?

	Agree	Disagree
1. When a member is causing trouble during a meeting, it is best to discipline him or her before the rest of the group. Thus the group will know that they cannot get away with the same thing.	_____	_____
2. If a couple of members are goofing off, you can bring them into line by threatening to punish the whole group. For example, threaten to cancel a skating party or make the whole group wash windows.	_____	_____
3. In order to command the respect of all members and keep good discipline, you should let them know that you are the boss.	_____	_____
4. You should try to have the members look to you as just another young person like themselves.	_____	_____
5. In order to encourage members to complete their homework, you should continuously tell them about the awards that they can win.	_____	_____
6. When you see younger members doing work incorrectly, you should not correct them for fear of discouraging or hurting their feelings.	_____	_____
7. After you have explained the meaning and purpose of record books, you should not keep reminding members to keep up their books.	_____	_____
8. If members do not listen to instructions, they should be punished.	_____	_____
9. You should delegate as much responsibility as possible to 4-H members; they should feel that they are responsible for the program.	_____	_____
10. When you appoint a committee chairman, you should let the chairman pick the committee members and have complete responsibility for carrying out the assignment.	_____	_____
11. You should always be eager to find and develop the leadership possibilities in others.	_____	_____
12. If club members fail to plan club activities, you should do the planning for them.	_____	_____
13. You should encourage your club to include members from different backgrounds and races.	_____	_____
14. If disagreeable situations develop, you should join the rest of the members in complaining so that they will know you are sympathetic with them.	_____	_____
15. You should give public praises and recognition to members as often as possible	_____	_____
16. In assigning jobs to group members, you give them what you feel they are best able to do.	_____	_____
